

I absolutely decry any changing of our telemarketing law. It has saved me calls that peaked up to dozens per day (my number is unlisted) of people who do not take no for an answer by calling back constantly. If I wanted to be bothered by rude people selling over priced nonsense, I can easily contact them. It was to the point that I just quit answering the phone. Now I receive few calls, if any per month. Our law has been very effective, it is my hope that you do not thrust me back into having to deal with phone peddlers, who need to find another way to find business. We have managed to do without this sort of thing for years prior to having to enact this law, and I don't want to be hassled by the FCC watering it down. Its not broke, please don't try to fix it.
